Candidates Briefing

At the close of nominations there will be a candidates' briefing where the rules of the election will be explained. This will take place at 9am on Tuesday the 3rd of November via Zoom. Details of the meeting will be circulated once nominations have closed. Attendance of this meeting is mandatory in order to understand the campaigning rules.

You will need to submit your manifesto by email, along with the nominations form by 5pm, Monday 2nd November

Please email: tlsu@trinitylaban.ac.uk

Job Role:

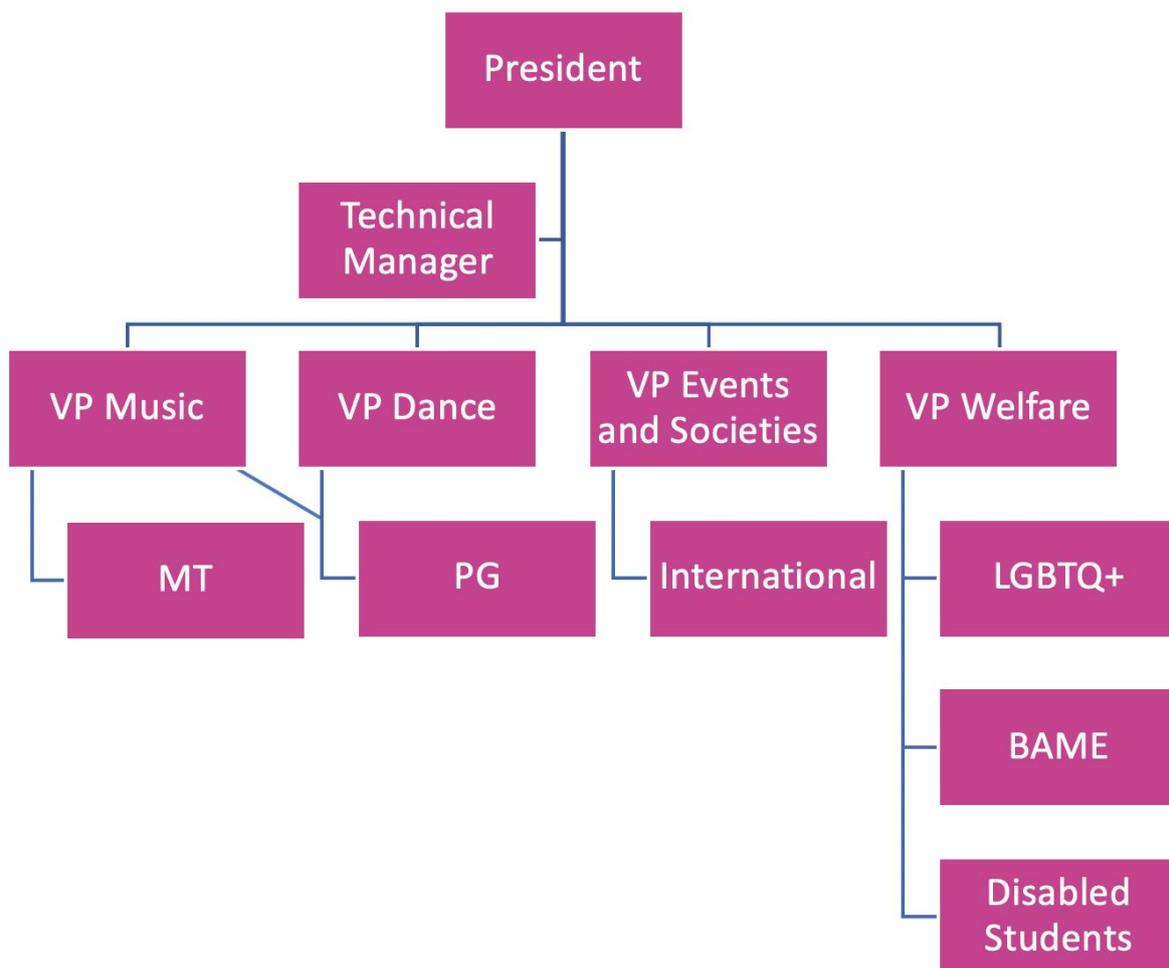

The Vice-Presidents will receive an honorarium of £350 per term.

Structure of the Student Union

Manifesto Rules

When applying for a position on the SU you must also submit a manifesto. There are some rules set out in our governing document, the constitution, which tell you what you can and cannot do. It is very important you read and abide by these rules. The following is taken from Schedule I to the TLSU constitution:

1.7 Manifestos and Publicity:

- 1.7.1 Candidates may produce a manifesto of no more than one side of A4 paper.
- 1.7.2 Candidates may also use posters, social media and emails for their campaign.
- 1.7.3 No manifesto or written matter on social media and email may mention any other member of TLSU, and may not make, explicitly or implicitly, any false, libellous or offensive statements.
- 1.7.4 Before publication, all manifestos must be approved by the Returning Officer.
- 1.7.5 Manifestos shall be displayed by appropriate media of communication, such as posters, via email, website, social media and any other form that the Returning Officer feels is suitable. Hard copies shall be kept in the offices at King Charles Court and Creekside and shall be available upon request.
- 1.7.6 On election days, a copy of the manifesto shall be placed alongside a photograph of the candidate (if desired) by the ballot box. All manifestos and photographs of those running for election shall be publicised in an equal fashion.
- 1.7.7 The Returning Officer, in consultation with the SU Executive, shall approve arrangements for candidates to have equal opportunities to publish posters and other promotional materials. Any posters must comply with building regulations. The material of any poster must be non-defamatory and without reference, explicit or implicit, to other Candidates. All posters must be approved and signed by the Returning Officer before being posted.
- 1.7.8 Removal of posters without the permission of the Returning Officer or his/her assistant(s) acting under this Clause of the Constitution is strictly prohibited.
- 1.7.9 No canvassing or similar publicity shall take place in the immediate vicinity of any ballot box.
- 1.7.10 Once all manifestos have been received, and at least five working days before voting opens, the Executive Committee will organise a hustings at which the Candidates running for a sabbatical position can address the Student body. This will take the form of a small individual spoken presentation from each Candidate and a subsequent Q&A session chaired by a member of the Executive Committee.

- 1.7.11 A student may not be nominated for more than one post in the same election.
- 1.7.12 Voting for the posts of TLSU Committee shall take place at the appropriate voting stations designated by the Returning Officer. The exact voting times will be stated when the candidates up for election have been announced and will take place throughout the designated day(s) of the election. The Returning Officer shall publicise the location and arrangements of the voting station(s).
- 1.7.13 All full Members of TLSU are eligible to vote in TLSU elections. A voting slip shall be issued to each voter only after his/her name has been appropriately marked on the list of TLSU Members. A voter shall not be obliged to use all the votes at his/her disposal.
- 1.7.14 Votes shall be cast in sealed ballot boxes or through an equivalent system of electronic voting approved by the Returning Officer.
- 1.7.15 Voting slips shall bear the name of each candidate and position contested; in alphabetical order.
- 1.7.16 Members who are unable to vote because of illness or unavoidable absence may nominate a member to act as a proxy or email their vote. The proxy may cast a vote on production of written authorization from the absent member. If they choose to email their vote, they will send this to the Returning Officer.
- 1.7.17 Voters shall have the option to reject all the candidates and to call for the re-opening of nominations (RON).

Given the ongoing situation because of COVID-19, these elections will be carried out by completely electronic means. Each candidate will have their manifesto circulated by email, by Trinity Laban Students' Union, and shared on the TLSU Instagram and Facebook if they provide a 1080px x 1080px version. Candidates may publish their manifestos and campaign posters to their personal social media accounts and can engage campaigners to do the same.

You are advised to read the constitution before you stand for election.
You can find a copy of it here: <http://tlsu.org/about/constitution>

Every candidate should make each of their campaigners aware of the election rules stated above as candidates can be disqualified if rules are broken on their behalf. On the next page is a handy guide on how and what to put in a manifesto.

Building a Manifesto

Top 10 Manifesto Writing Tips

Your election manifesto is your chance to tell people why they should vote for you and what you'd do if elected. It outlines the positive change that you will bring for students. Whilst campaigning, meeting people, debates and promotional stunts may convince some voters, for many it is the candidates' manifestos that will help them decide who to vote for. Students at Trinity Laban are more likely to be encouraged to vote on issues that directly affect them.

Here are ten top tips to consider when writing your manifesto:

1. Describe benefits not features

People want to know why your good idea is such a good idea, how will you make things better/cheaper/faster/bigger/whatever? One of your policies might be to improve lighting on campus (that's a feature) but make sure you mention that this will make people feel safer and reduce the threat of crime (they're the benefits).

By describing the benefits of your ideas you're helping people understand why their lives would be better if you were elected and helps them think about why they should vote for you.

2. Ask existing officers for their feedback

Once you've come up with some ideas try to chat to existing officers. These guys have a really unique insight into the role that you want to do. They can give you feedback on your ideas and it might help generate some new ones!

3. Make sure you know the role

Have a look through the role description for the position you're running for. What sort of things would be your responsibility if elected? These are the things you're most likely to be able to influence plus these are the things that people want to know about. Think about the type of people who might be particularly interested in voting for your position and make sure you mention something for them.

4. Stand out from the crowd

Every year people put the same sort of things on their manifesto; increase participation, try to get more money for X, Y and Z, make the union more relevant. The fact is, generally no one is going to say the opposite of these things so it's almost pointless putting them in. Students scanning through manifestos are more likely to pay attention to the candidates that stand out so make sure you include all your best ideas.

5. Include something for everyone

Think about the different sorts of people that might vote in the elections and try to include something for them in your manifesto. Make sure you don't use jargon and acronyms that won't make sense to most people so everyone can understand what you're talking about.

6. Don't get too carried away!

Sometimes it can be easy to get carried away and start making promises left, right and centre but don't forget that if you're elected you're actually supposed to work on the things you included in your manifesto! Don't put things into your manifesto if you have no intention of following through on them. This is another reason to speak to the current officers ahead of campaigning, they can help you come up with realistic election pledges.

7. Find out what students want

Ask around to see what students actually want, try housemates, people on your course - you might be surprised at the ideas this generates. Find out if you can get results from surveys carried out by your students' union (if you ask them nicely they should be able to come up with some information for you), have a look at students' concerns and think about how you could address these.

8. It is not a "normal" job

When applying for a 'normal' job you go through the experience and skills they're looking for and explain how you fit those. The sabbatical officer election process is quite different - people are more interested in your ideas necessarily whether you're qualified to carry them out. By all means mention any relevant experience you have but try to make it relevant and don't make it at the expense of space for your amazing ideas.

9. Be realistic and ambitious

Your manifesto should be realistic - don't promise to lower prices and increase spending on everything, usually those two don't work well together! Don't make promises you can't keep as it can damage your reputation and that of the union. Equally though, be ambitious - just because someone says something isn't possible it doesn't mean you can't try it. Find yourself a balance between the two extremes.

10. Know the rules

No use coming up with something amazing if you're over the word limit or break another rule. Make sure you know what you are and aren't allowed to include in your manifesto, any word/size limits and how to submit it.

How do I submit my manifesto?

You will need to submit your manifesto by email, along with the nominations form by 5pm Monday November 2nd
